Forecast For Northwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Sunday 31 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Cold and dry with snow and ice into next week.

This Evening and Tonight:
Remaining dry through this evening and overnight with clear spells developing from the north, leading to a widespread frost. A cold night with winds gradually becoming lighter. Minimum temperature -3 deg C (27 deg F).

Monday:
A frosty start with spells of sunshine. Remaining dry, with cloud gradually increasing from the west later, turning the sunshine hazy. Overnight, rain and snow arrives for many. Maximum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Heavy rain and snow on Tuesday, perhaps lingering throughout. Remaining rather cold with outbreaks of rain and snow possible on Wednesday and Thursday with some drier interludes possible.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.